"Responding Heads is a voice command program that allows you to talk to your computer. Just speak a command or comment, click or tap anywhere on your screen and a special expressionless head appears on your desktop. You can type text into it using your keyboard, just like typing into any other window on your desktop. You can then use any existing voice recognition utility to control your computer. "Unlike existing software products in this category, Responding Heads allows you to get to grips with your computer in a way that is familiar to you. At the same time, the technology that is used by Responding Heads is proven and well suited to the task. So whether you are blind or have low vision, you can talk to your computer like you always have. "Responding Heads is a graphical application that runs natively in the Windows interface. It is free to all Windows users and you can download it from "The software is not just limited to voice commands. It is the all-in-one solution for making your computer hear and answer by speaking. All the major Office applications can be launched, and all your digital contents can be read out." Browser extensions are usually trivial tools, but at their worst they can waste your time and create issues for you. The Facebook extension, installed and used over 3,000,000 times, is the latest example of a browser extension that just gets in the way of users. The update notifies users to the fact that they are being tracked with a cookie, but the message is displayed at the wrong time, and the extension actively makes you change your settings by default. And most importantly, this is happening on a site that works for you. Facebook launched a new feature called custom audiences last week, which allow Facebook to make advertising personal for each person. With this feature, Facebook can add the right information to a person's profile, allowing it to target ads right at that person. The new feature isn't perfect, however. Facebook managed to make a major screw up, bringing the entire advertising system down. The company got used to the new feature and a bug caused the site to think that all users were upgraded, so all the ads being targeted were replaced by standard ads and the targeted ads were replaced with standard ads. This bug is extensive, and the only way for Facebook to recover is to go in a user's browser settings and remove the extension. Changing user settings is the best option, which seems

What's New in the Responding Heads?

Responding Heads is a software for Windows XP that has been developed and published in 2009 by Kein Gekko. In this article I will be installing the "Functionality Sweeping" feature into an existing Microsoft Office application suite. So we are going to use Microsoft Word 2007, Microsoft Excel 2007, Microsoft PowerPoint 2007 and Microsoft Access 2007. A word of caution, the following steps will involve the use of the Registry editing which may cause some problems if you do not do so carefully. It is always advisable to save a backup of this registry settings before attempting to edit, in case you screw up your system. The tools and the method I will show in this article for installing Functionality Sweeping is based on the method used by the Chrome extension "Functionality Sweeping 2.1" released on October 2011. The reason for this is that the last time I tested Functionality Sweeping, it did not work properly in Microsoft Office 2010. Initial instructions In order to successfully install Functionality Sweeping in Microsoft Office 2007, I was forced to install additional tools including the following: Microsoft Office Tools A. Microsoft Office Tools B. Microsoft Office Tools C. Microsoft Office Tools A. Download and install the Microsoft Office Tools A from the following link: Run the tool "Microsoft Office Tools A.exe". You will be prompted for the user name and password of your existing Windows user. If you don't have it, you can also add a user with administrative rights. Wait till the tool finishes installing and then start Microsoft Office Tools B. Microsoft Office Tools B. Download and install Microsoft Office Tools B from the following link: Run the tool "Microsoft Office Tools B.exe". You will be prompted for the user name and password of your existing Windows user. If you don't have it, you can also add a user with administrative rights. Wait till the tool finishes installing and then start Microsoft Office Tools C.
